A photograph of a dense, chaotic arrangement of electronic equipment, likely a DJ setup or a complex audio workstation. The scene is filled with various pieces of gear, including a mixing console, synthesizers, and numerous cables. A prominent pink text box is overlaid in the center, containing the text "No framework covers Portfolios, Finance, Marketing, HR...".

A delivery person is riding a bicycle down a narrow, cobblestone-paved city street. The person is wearing a bright red jacket and has a large white delivery box mounted on their back. The box features a red logo that resembles a stylized dome or a hand holding a bowl. The street is lined with tall, light-colored buildings. Several cars are parked along the right side of the street, including a white car in the foreground and a blue car further back. Other pedestrians are visible in the distance. The scene is captured in a cinematic style with soft lighting.

A wide-angle photograph of a large, empty assembly hall. The seating is arranged in a semi-circle, with rows of blue and white upholstered chairs. At the front of the hall, there is a central wooden podium with a microphone. Behind the podium, there are two green doors and two round wall clocks. The walls are a light blue color, and the ceiling is high with some lighting fixtures visible. The overall atmosphere is formal and professional.

The popular/infamous matrix structure: alignment in two (or more) dimensions with parallel management lines

"One key finding from organizations with matrix structures is indeed that higher-level managers become overloaded because lower-level managers are unable to resolve conflicts and therefore refer conflicts to the executives. In other words, an unintended consequence of a matrix structure is actually to make the organization more centralized and to remove accountability from lower-level managers."

The unFIX model

Sometimes, a team
must be formed fast

There's not always time for forming, storming, norming, and performing

Static teams are not agile because...

The increased pace of change and having one crisis after the other requires an ability to form new teams more rapidly.

“A complex system that works is invariably found to have evolved from a simple system that worked. A complex system designed from scratch never works and cannot be patched up to make it work. You have to start over with a working simple system.”

" The unFIX model pinpoints many of the problems we saw (and mostly fixed) at Spotify. Specifically, this provides more flexibility to fit different organizations, and more clear guidance on how to scale beyond a few hundred people. "
